Thumbs up!

Life Rune Window Decal

Each National Alliance member or supporter who receives this monthly BULLETIN will find enclosed with this issue one high quality decal with the Alliance's 50-year-old Life Rune with oak wreath logo, donated by Maryland member J.G. The image is symmetrical, so can be applied on either side of a glass surface. Proper transfer to a glass, porcelain, or metal surface is a five-step process with instructions found here: https://www.carstickers.com/sticker-application-instructions/. Show your Alliance pride by sporting this decal!

Cosmotheist Books

Four new titles by author Dr. Thomas Dalton, PhD, are being offered at Cosmotheist Books this month. Dalton wrote a "Christmas Message" on Dr. Kevin MacDonald's scholarly Web site in December, responding to an article published there written by Dr. William Pierce's biographer, Dr. Robert Griffin. We picked up part of Dalton's piece, republished here: https://nationalvanguard.org/2019/12/racially-conscious-whites-and-christianity/

Dr. Griffin, who apparently has recently developed a soft spot for Christianity, had written that those who are anti-Christian are also often anti-White, so should not be trusted by the "alt-right." Dalton responded that although Jews often oppose Christianity, "Griffin's ploy to link 'anti-Christian' and 'anti-White' fails to hold." He went on to say: "The other main group of anti-Christians are the secular, rationalist, and naturalistic Whites. These people, I would suggest, are among the toughest and most resolute White nationalists." He could have been describing Cosmotheists or members of the National Alliance.

When Dr. Griffin went on to say that the "alt-right" crowd, especially young people, "should use Christianity to their advantage," Dalton continued:

> But [Griffin] offers no concrete suggestions at all (Hey students, "see what you can come up with"). What, indeed, could one even plausibly "come up with," in an alt-right sense, from a Christian point of view? Given that it's Christmas time, let's take a minute to examine this matter a bit more closely. Consider this question: What in God's name (so to speak) is even remotely pro-White about the Bible? I'll tell you: nothing. The Old Testament was written by Jews, about Jews, and for Jews. It is resolutely anti-goyim. It is nothing more than a war manual for the defense of the Jewish race, along with some moronic theological cover.
> The New Testament was also written by and about Jews: Jesus, Mary, Joseph, 12 Apostles, Paul, "Mark," "Luke," "Matthew," "John" — all ethnic Jews. The chronology of events, furthermore, strongly suggests that Paul invented his demi-god Jesus, primarily, it seems, as a stunt to undermine Roman paganism and to draw in the gullible masses, to persuade them to worship the Jewish God and his "son." With its emphasis on the presumed afterlife, Paul's constructed theology was profoundly anti-life, anti-world, and anti-corporeality. He never believed in it — that artful liar — nor did any of his fellow Hebrews. Present-day Jews are laughing up their sleeve over the foolish Christians and their "love thy neighbor" and "turn the other cheek"; and of course, they are right there, first in line, ready to exploit that love.
> There is no sense, then, in which the Bible is pro-White. In fact, the New Testament, rightly understood as an anti-Roman manifesto, is profoundly anti-White. At best, we might say that the Bible is pro-humanity. But even here, it is cloaked with an insidious Jewish leveling of all peoples, all "equal before God" — all except the Jews, who are first among equals.

After reading this, Chairman Williams suggested that Dr. Dalton would probably have done a better job of writing Dr. Pierce's biography, The Fame of a Dead Man's Deeds, than did Dr. Griffin, especially the chapter on Cosmotheism — although otherwise, Fame is a well-written account of our founder's adult journey from physicist to the man some called the de facto leader of National Socialists worldwide.

The four books published by Dr. Thomas Dalton added this month at cosmotheistchurch.org/shop/ are, On the Jews and Their Lies by Martin Luther, "one of the most remarkable books in history. Owing to its controversy, it is also one of the least-known. Now for the first time, the entire text is presented in English, in an authoritative fashion — complete with a proper introduction, detailed footnotes, and helpful bibliography and index." The 2019 unabridged two-volume set of Mein Kampf by Adolf Hitler, translated into English by Dr. Dalton, is described as "the autobiography and articulated worldview of one of the most consequential leaders in world history. It is also one of the most maligned and least understood texts of the 20th century.... This new translation is clear, lucid, and highly readable — and yet true to the original. And, unlike every other edition, this version has authentic section headings embedded in the text, which serve to both organize Hitler's ideas and to parse long sections of text into manageable units." A shorter version, The Essential Mein Kampf, "brings together the best, timeliest, and most interesting passages from the original two-volume work. It includes a detailed introduction, section headings, helpful footnotes, bibliography, and a useful index." Other titles on the Jewish question by Dr. Dalton will be added to Cosmotheist Books in coming months as we can afford to stock them.

Other titles added this month are Lothrop Stoddard's classic, The French Revolution in San Domingo — The History of the Racial and Social Revolution Between the White French and the Natives on the Island of Haiti in the Year 1789; and the 8.5" x 11" booklet Jewish Domination of Weimar Germany 1919-1932, originally published in Berlin in 1933 by the General League of Anti-Communist Associations. Two large format books, loaded with beautiful full-color plates, have been added: Arthur Rackham's Color Illustrations for Richard Wagner's Ring with text, and K.E. Sullivan's Greek Myths and Legends. Also American author John Steinbeck's Nobel Prize-winning novel for literature In Dubious Battle. Also The Testament of Adolf Hitler, The Hitler-Bormann Documents, with an introduction by L. Craig Fraser. The addition of these ten books, along with the new Power of Truth, Volume 9 CD, brings the total of books, CDs, and DVDs available on cosmotheistchurch.org/shop/ to 178, a near nine-fold increase from the 20 selections that we first offered when our online book store was launched in 2017 — and this during a period of near-constant blacklisting and deplatforming by our enemies. Customers should try to order some books and CDs now, and you may be surprised that you are no longer blocked by our traditional enemies.

Legal Update

The outrage reported in previous issues of the BULLETIN wherein Jewish-run PayPal had stolen more than $1,000 from the Alliance has been resolved, thanks to the Tennessee Department of Financial Institutions, the agency with which we had filed a complaint against the Jewish mega-corporation. We are still denied PayPal's services, but we have evolved a new means of accepting payments, after much hard work, false starts with similarly infested or cowardly companies, and a great deal of time spent without the ability to conduct online commerce.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Williams, The Tennessee Department of Financial Institutions received a response from PayPal, Inc. ("PayPal") regarding the consumer complaint that was submitted against them. PayPal tried to explain their position in this matter. Upon receipt of the response and review by Department staff, we requested additional documentation from PayPal... A resolution has been reached and the funds that were withheld from your three (3) PayPal accounts, amounting to $1038.03, have been refunded... The resolution you sought has been achieved, the Department is closing your file. Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention...

Sometimes it is the small victories that are the sweetest.

Two complaints filed against West Virginia Circuit Court Judge Jennifer Dent by Chairman Williams with the Judicial Investigations Commission (JIC) of West Virginia were received by the JIC on 27 January. Mr. Williams wishes Jennifer luck in responding to these well-documented complaints — one civil, the other criminal — in trials she presided over involving him and the litigious, but now fugitive, Garland DeCourcy, associated with coup attempts against the Alliance which have been covered in the pages of the BULLETIN over the past four and one-half years. The West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals (WVSCA) currently has Chairman Williams' brief in hand for the appeal of his criminal conviction which occurred in Judge Dent's courtroom. An interesting development: The same WVSCA that twice suspended Magistrate Carrie Wilfong last year, without pay, for her verified alcoholism and drug addiction has reinstated her to the bench in Pocahontas County. It was Wilfong's wrongful criminal conviction of Williams that he had appealed to Dent's Circuit Court in the first place, and her two suspensions by WVSCA are covered in Williams' brief to that same WVSCA. The five sitting justices on the WVSCA have had their own troubles since they were all recently hit with Articles of Impeachment for corruption, among other charges, leading to several convictions and retirements.

There is progress in the National Alliance's appeal of the adverse ruling in Piatt County Circuit Court, covered in previous BULLETINs: The court reporter will file our court transcripts by 18 February and the circuit clerk will file the record of appeal by 2 March; then our attorney will file our appellant brief by 6 April; appellee's reply brief by 11 May, then our appellant reply by 25 May. Oral argument before the Illinois Supreme Court of Appeals is to be determined. We've been through all of this before with Chairman Williams' pro se appeal to the WVSCA. Our Illinois attorney took this appeal for a set fee instead of at his usual hourly rate and has already been paid, so now we wait, perhaps a year or more. The Alliance's $850,000 counterclaim in a Virginia court will likely be delayed, pending the outcome of the Illinois appeal, but does not depend on that outcome being favorable for us. It's simply more delays, as has been usual when dealing with the courts.

Correspondence

Dear Chairman Williams: Here is a general summary of the events on MLK Day. My crew took public transportation out and about to distribute "No King Over Us" fliers in New York City's German,

WASP, Irish, and Italian communities. Each of us had 50 fliers. Some of the older Italians who were more conservative were willing to read what we offered them. When I went to the WASPy area, one of the gentleman asked, "wasn't the National Alliance involved with Timothy McVeigh?" I said, "No, the National Alliance had nothing to do with that and doesn't condone illegal activities." Around Park Avenue some showed interest... I think most Whites in NYC are sick of all the diversity though, and actually want to do something about it, but most didn't seem to care about MLK Day. We stuck together and were organized and that is how we get things done. I think my being young and giving a more human face to an ideology that appears to most people as somehow "evil" helped. — J.G., New York

Chairman Will, I wasn't aware of author Thomas Dalton until reading his outstanding "Christmas Message" on National Vanguard last month. I went ahead and purchased three titles from his site, Mein Kampf, volumes 1 and 2, and On the Jews and Their Lies. Dr. Dalton's MK translation is masterful, much better than either the 1938 Murphy or the 1943 Manheim editions... He takes the meaning behind MK to a new level with a more prescient look at what the book actually entails from a modern perspective, pointing out how timeless MK is because of the eternal natural truths therein, and how they still relate to the degradation and immorality Aryans still face almost a century later... I believe over time this English translation will be considered the gold standard by which all others are measured.

Though written over five centuries ago, Dalton puts a fresh coat of understanding on Martin Luther's On the Jews and their Lies through his thoughtful introduction, pointing out how Luther's words hone in with honest directness to the Jews and their unending destructive and nefarious behavior. Like Hitler's, Luther's words also still point to our present condition, engineered and dominated by Jewish influence through propaganda via media, and through banking and entertainment. It's as though Luther wrote the book yesterday. I can't recommend these titles highly enough. Thanks. — C.B., California

Report from Virginia
Second Amendment Rally

Chairman Williams: I attended the big January 20th rally in Richmond. What a waste of time, money, and effort! Dr. Pierce had described most of the attendees in the National Alliance Membership Handbook: "hobbyists" dressed up in their cool militia outfits, showing off their cool guns, and law and order "Constitutional conservatives," with signs like "It's my right under the Constitution." Do you think the State or Federal government was scared by the dress-ups? Not a bit! Many of the Second Amendment Web pages did their best to portray the event as a multiracial love-fest with Black and White protesters posing for pictures together. Black Panthers and even open queers showed up with their signs. How wonderful! But no so-called "White supremacists" were seen after all the media build-up claiming spooky organized White "haters" had planned to attend and disrupt, even bomb the place. The "respectable" gun owners, that were 98% White, crowed about there not being any [visible] hateful White supremacists in the crowd. These authoritarian types were even shown picking up litter. Good Whites. Virginia lawmakers will still pass all of the laws this crowd was protesting against — and no matter how unjust these laws are in this crowd's view, they will obey. What's important is that they got to play dress-up for the day, exercise their freedoms of assembly and speech, while letting everyone know that they are not "racists." What a joke! — S.R., Virginia

Chairman Williams responds: It's ironic that the Second Amendment was originally included in the US Constitution by our nation's Founding Fathers — many of whom were from the Commonwealth of Virginia, and all of whom were White men — for the express purpose of always having an armed citizenry to oppose a government that might become tyrannical (and not for the purpose of hunting or target shooting — or so grandma could keep a handgun beside her bed). Though not ratified until 1791, with the other nine amendments that make up the Bill of Rights, Virginia was 15 years ahead of the Constitution when her patriot and statesman George Mason recommended the Latin motto Sic semper tyrannis, meaning "thus always to tyrants" — commonly translated as "death to tyrants" — be incorporated in the state seal during the 1776 Virginia Convention. On the seal, still in effect to this day, the female image represents the Roman figure Virtus (Virtue), which is a figure of peace. The supine male figure under Virtus' foot is Tyranny. Virtus is shown holding a long spear; the impression is that a battle has already been won. On the ground, beside Tyranny, lies a royal crown. It is obvious that Tyranny represents Great Britain, and the image of Virtus, standing victorious over Tyranny, represents the victory of Virginia over the British crown. Tyranny has a broken chain in hand. Thus, "death to tyrants" is shown to be the motto's literal meaning. How soon Virginians forget this. (Incidentally, Virginia patriot John Wilkes Booth supposedly shouted "Sic semper tyrannis!" as he assassinated Abraham Lincoln, and Timothy McVeigh, who took direct action against a government he deemed tyrannical, wore a t-shirt bearing the words "Sic semper tyrannis" below a picture of Abraham Lincoln on the day he was arrested after his Oklahoma City deed. We suspect that use of the motto will continue for some time to come.)

Commentary by Chairman William White Williams

More on Recruiting

The National Alliance seeks strong, healthy, successful members, not losers and misfits. We want recruits who strengthen our organization, who give us enhanced capabilities for accomplishing our task. In other words, we want recruits who are strong enough to give us some of their strength, who are skilled enough to use some of their skill for our purpose, who have enough resources of one sort or another to increase our resources. It is important to keep this in mind, because the easiest people to recruit are often not the ones we want. People who are down and out, for whatever reason, may seek us as a source of strength for themselves, but, except in extraordinary cases, we do not seek them. We are not a club, and we are not a charitable organization. People who do not have their own lives in order and under control are not likely to be able to help us with our task. We want members who are morally upright, physically healthy and attractive, mentally bright and stable, and who display the behavior and habits which usually lead to success in life.

The most important single thing we look for in a potential recruit is character: inner strength, self-discipline, and self-respect coupled with good values. In a young person especially, who has not had time to acquire skills or accumulate resources, character may be the best indicator of the potential value the person has for us. Intelligence and personality are also indicators the recruiter should consider, especially in younger people: the person who can grasp concepts easily and solve problems will be more valuable to us than the slow learner, just as the person whose personality traits make him likable and easy to work with usually will be more useful than the person with a "difficult" personality.

In a mature prospect, the record of personal accomplishment will tell the recruiter much about the desirability of the person as a member. The person who has been successful in his studies, his trade, or his profession will not necessarily make a good member, but on the average he is a better prospect than the person of mediocre accomplishment. Good members come from all walks of life, from nearly every trade and profession, both sexes and all ages, and from a wide range of socioeconomic levels. We find them where we can. Some new members are coming to us now by finding us on the Internet, but until we have enough trusted members spread across every region, willing to meet and evaluate new members near them who come to us this way, we will always depend on current members recruiting directly the sort of member they know will add strength, skills, and resources to help us in our task.

Dr. Pierce reminded us that if we are looking for young recruits we are more likely to find what we want on a university campus than in a pool hall, and if we are seeking more mature recruits we are more likely to find good ones in a professional association or among donors to an organization dedicated to controlling immigration or preserving the Second Amendment than in a line outside the unemployment office. Member S.R.'s evaluation of the gun-totin' "constitutional conservatives" aka "cuckservatives" that he observed at the Second Amendment rally in Richmond, Virginia, this month may be slightly exaggerated, but he characterizes that ilk correctly for the most part: They oppose change generally — or more accurately, they oppose unfashionable change. They worship authority and respectability. S.R had them pegged: They will support any policy, no matter how degenerative, if it is the established policy and if other respectable people like them support it. This type of yahoo conservative will not be radicalized to join the National Alliance. There is that minority of kinsmen, however, who consider themselves conservatives who, like us, recognize the adverse social, political and demographic changes which have taken place in recent decades as degenerative, and for that reason they oppose these changes. If they can be made to see beyond the symptoms of the decay they oppose and understand its fundamental causes — if they can be radicalized — they can be recruited.

In the past two issues of the BULLETIN we discussed the negative traits in certain people which Dr. Pierce had suggested we avoid recruiting: the hobbyist and the talker. In this month's BULLETIN and in the following three, we'll describe other personality and character defects that we do not want to deal with in our organization. This month, Dr. Pierce tells us about the gung-ho loudmouth:

[The gung-ho loudmouth is] not to be confused with the talker that we covered in last month's BULLETIN. The talker is usually of a passive disposition, whereas the gung-ho loudmouth is a would-be activist who shoots from the lip. He likes to let off steam by proposing direct action against the enemies of White civilization, immediately if not sooner. He'll pick up a newspaper, point to a news item about some outrageous act by Blacks or Jews or the government, and exclaim, "What are we going to do about that? Why are we just talking and publishing books? The time has come for action. Let's go get those SOBs!"

His idea of "action" is something which will cause a public stir and get the Alliance mentioned on the evening news. He wants excitement. He wants to get in some licks. Often he imagines that he has had a "success" if he has been able to provoke an angry confrontation with some member of the public who has taken exception to a piece of Alliance material or to something the loudmouth has said. Sometimes he imagines that he has leadership potential which has been overlooked by the leaders of the National Alliance, and that the rank and file will gather around him if he talks and acts the way he thinks a leader should talk and act, based on his careful observation of many of Hollywood's most dramatic and exciting films.

Of course, there is a time for action of the sort this fellow wants. Some of the activities Local NA Units engage in may make the evening news. Most of the Alliance's activities don't make headlines, however. Most don't involve street action. Most seem like pretty tame stuff to the gung-ho loudmouth. The recruiter must try to decide whether his prospect is capable of calming down and becoming a disciplined Alliance member when he understands the Alliance's program better, or whether he is someone who is absolutely set on street activity for its own sake. In the latter case, if there is a Local Unit in the area which regularly engages in street activity, perhaps it can put a gung-ho recruit to good use; but if there isn't, this fellow probably should be left to make his own headlines without getting the Alliance involved. As a member he would only cause morale problems — and perhaps legal problems — for other members with whom he came into contact.

The importance of our members recruiting the right new people who can help with careful Alliance-building can't be emphasized enough. Take care to bring in only those alongside whom you will be proud to serve. We will reach a new level in membership soon enough where there will be authorized Local Units working as disciplined crews, competing with other Local Units around the country to be the best at recruiting and spreading hope among our people in their areas. We've seen our Alliance program work like this before; it will work again as we bring in more exceptional, determined kinsmen.

Let's get going. It is getting late. Time's a wasting! Lana Williams, my wife and our Alliance's Business Manager, may well be our best recruiter. She took the initiative and has spent the better part of the last two weeks, searching for the email addresses of former Alliance members who had dropped out years ago for one reason or another. Lana has been using an Internet "people-finder" service, often copying two or three emails of each former member, trying to find at least one that is current and valid. She has been blind-copying a mass email from me to these "high percentage shots" that can be reasonably confirmed, with a digitized September 2019 BULLETIN attached, to show these hundreds of former Alliance members our progress during the past five years. We almost never share an electronic version of our exclusive BULLETIN, for good reason, but will make this exception for those who have received it in the past — and just might like what they see. W. W. W.
